About the Company

The Worshipful Company of Masons is number 30 in the order of precedence of the ancient Livery Companies of the City of London, as set by the Aldermen of the City in 1515. Today there are over 110 and the number continues to grow.

The focus of the Livery Company is to preserve and encourage the use of natural stone in the built environment. This includes supporting the training of craftsmen as well as the preservation and appreciation of iconic historic stone buildings.

Encouraging the use of natural stone

Happily stonemasonry is still practised today and the Worshipful Company of Masons is at the forefront of supporting the craft through education and preservation. The Company's membership includes professionals from the construction and property sector, specialists in stonemasonry as well as those with connections to or interest in the City and its national and international importance. Membership is made up of Liverymen, Freemen and Yeoman Masons.

A Word from the Master of the Company Dr Christine Ridgen

I am very pleased to recommend to you this sale of masons' work in support of the Masons' Company Craft Fund. This charity supports masons during their early years in the craft and is a potential lifeline for them. Without the financial support we give them they would have a hard time and could indeed drop out of training, so for the long term health of this ancient craft we ask for your support by buying an item.

Current Covid-19 Regulations prevent a repeat of the excellent open event which we held last year in Gallery Different, but in addition to viewing this catalogue, do contact the gallery directly if you would like a personal visit to see the works of art on display (government regulations permitting). Details of how to acquire an item of work are included within the catalogue together with full descriptions of those items available.

This event celebrates the excellent work done by these gifted masons, please enjoy this catalogue and be generous in selecting items of stone for your house, garden or that very special Christmas present.

Dr Christine Ridgen, Master

The Work of the Charity

Being able to foster the future of stone masonry in skills training and building restoration is central to the Company's existence, and in order to meet these objectives the Craft Fund Charity was set up in 1985 to promote any charitable purpose which will encourage the exercise of and maintain the standards of the craft of stonemasonry; preserve and improve the craft of stonemasonry; or foster promote and increase the interest of the public in the craft of stonemasonry. While the Trustees are Liverymen, the charity is independent of the Masons' Company.

The charity provides financial assistance for Yeoman Masons who are seeking training; provides funding for apprentices, students and trainees; awards an annual bursary at the City & Guilds of London Art School or other suitable training centre for a student nominated by the school. Additionally, the Fund makes an annual grant to the Building Crafts College to help give students workplace experience; and provides a grant towards the cost of sending students to an annual study tour in Italy. Finally it has supported the periodic Stone Bench competitions in the City of London; and it also manages and funds the Duke of Gloucester Awards for Excellence in Stonemasonry.

The Venue

Gallery Different is delighted to be host of this event. A contemporary fine art Gallery in the heart of the West End, Gallery Different has a sculptural tradition and represents a number of artists who utilise stone in their fine art practice.

The Gallery welcomes all our guests to what promises to be a fascinating and enlightening exhibition to learn more about the work of the Company's Craft Fund and to view, and to purchase some wonderful stone. The work is both from practising stonemasons and from student stonemasons. Artwork is available to purchase in advance from this catalogue, as well during the exhibition, by contacting the gallery. All Artists will receive payment for their work, and all profits will go directly to the Masons' Company Craft Fund. This exhibition takes place during the gallery's Winter Collective, a group exhibition of gallery artists. Any purchase of works from this exhibition will also benefit the Craft Fund.

Gallery Different is a covid secure venue and the safety of our visitors is paramount. When able to do so, we are operating restricted numbers, sanitising stations, a one way system and private appointments so that you may visit to view and purchase in confidence and safety.

How to Buy

All work in the catalogue is priced excluding delivery which can be arranged at cost. Purchases may be made by contacting the Gallery by phone or email, or by visiting the Gallery website at www.gallerydifferent.co.uk where work may also be purchased online.

Josephine Crossland

Having studied under artist and sculptor Michelle de Bruin in Scotland, Josephine's workshop is now based at the Hutton Stone Quarry in the Scottish Borders. Her work is hugely varied, ranging from architectural carving to hand cut lettering and sculpture. Last year she completed the Lettering Arts Trust Journeyman Scheme through a partnership between the Worshipful Company of Masons and the Incorporation of Masons of Glasgow, where she was given the opportunity to study lettering under letter carver John Neilson in North Wales for 8 weeks.

Her sculptural work often depicts and reflects observations of the natural world.

Sue Aperghis

After 30 years as a graphic designer and swapping a mouse for a chisel, Sue Aperghis graduated From the City And Guilds of London Art school, achieving a distinction in the architectural and historical Stone Carving Diploma. In carving her interpretation of Sargeant Jagers First World War Officer figure for her final year piece, she was awarded the Masons Company prize. She was also successful in winning the overall graduating years lettering prize, and the Taylor Pearce and Roger De Grey awards for drawing.

Will Bowsher

Will Bowsher has just finished his first year studying stonemasonry at Moulton College in Northamptonshire.

Before taking the decision to retrain, Will worked in the animation industry on a number of children's television programmes and advertisements.

The work in this exhibition has been made using knives and improvised tools.

George Edwards

George's work is an exploration of historical art and architecture through drawing and carving. In 2018, George graduated with distinction in historic architectural stone carving from City and Guilds of London Art School. During his time there, he was awarded the Brinsley Ford travel scholarship, which took him to Rome for five weeks to study classical sculpture using his skills as a draughtsman. This experience has influenced the development and direction his practice.

Since studying, George has been employed as a letter carver for a variety of private projects. The most notable being his contribution to the hand carved lettering on The British Normandy Memorial under lettering artist Richard Kindersley.

Originally from Oxford, George now lives and works in South East London.

Louis Francis

As a classically trained stone carver, Louis Francis has worked with stone for the last 12 years and is a registered member of the Registered Qualified Memorial Fixers administered by the National Association of Memorial Masons (NAMM). He set up Francis Stone Carving in 2013 and has been honoured to include work at Windsor Castle in his portfolio.

His work is predominantly focused around letter carving and repairs. He has worked on many war memorials with his attention to detail becoming his strongest asset as he progresses through his career. In 2016 he was approached to work on a memorial in Cambridgeshire for the company Sacred Stone, carving memories onto stone facades in Long Barrow burial grounds.

He thrives on the end result and meeting the criteria set by the customer often resulting in raising the expectations with the image on paper becoming an actual portrayal of work carved into any piece of stone. He feels that a memory needs to last a lifetime and since his work often arises from personal recommendations, he continues to aim for nothing but perfection.

Carrie Horwood

After her sculpture degree Carrie moved from Canterbury to Gloucester to take up an apprenticeship at Gloucester Cathedral. She completed her training in 2002 and moved into the commercial sector. She spent 3 more years working as a stonemason before venturing out on her own.

She started her business, Cat's Eye Carving, in November 2005 and continues to go from strength to strength. She has organised 5 stonemason's festivals raising thousands for charity and has taken part in several exhibitions. Over the last 15 years she has designed and carved many sculptures, including heraldry for a castle, and a sculpture in Highgate cemetery, house names and numbers and commemorative plaques for private homes, houses and churches. 2020 sees her working on her most important commission, a new war memorial for a Forest of Dean village, and on 22nd November she celebrates a 15 year work anniversary in the craft of stonemasonry.

Rosie Jones

Rosie is mostly concerned with form and abstraction. Her sculptures are not simply abstract forms but often take on an anthropomorphic quality because of her fascination in people and relationships. She feels the need to give the work an emotional charge, which transpires into dynamic and sensual pieces.

The sculptures on display form part of a series inspired by the primitive symbolism of Pre-Columbian art and European cave art, focusing on the power of divine feminine energy. These works bring us back to the beginnings of sexuality, of eroticism and fertility.

Having graduated from Newcastle University in 2007 with a degree in Fine Arts, Rosie went on to study Historic Stone Carving at The City & Guilds of London Art School. She exhibits widely across the UK and has been awarded the Duke of Gloucester Award for excellence in stone carving.

James Kirby

James is a long established independent stone mason and carver working in the London area, and the South of England.

He has worked on most of London's major historic buildings. He also has a lot of experience in the repair and fabrication of stone tracery, and the repair and replication of statuary.

He studied portrait modelling, and carving at The City and Guilds of London Art School, and has also exhibited twice with the Society of Portrait sculptors. He is a member of the Master Carvers Association.

James has a particular interest in portraiture, and has carved numerous portraits of the family, and staff at Hever Castle, which is part of an ongoing project to replace portraits in the Wet Grotto at Hever Castle.

Josh Locksmith

Josh studied fine art sculpture at Camberwell college of art, graduating in 2011, when he was given the opportunity to study abroad at the Universidad Complutense in Madrid for a year. It was here that he was first introduced to marble carving and his passion for the craft was first realised.

With a new found passion for stone carving, Josh went on to study at the City and Guilds of London Art School, graduating in 2014. Upon graduating Josh established London Stone Carving Ltd with three fellow Alumni, creating Fine art and architectural sculpture for numerous high profile clients.

Josh's sculpture is inspired by his classical training, referencing the historical use of foliage within decorative stone work.

Catherine Martin

Catherine studied Fine Art, specialising in sculpture at Chelsea College of Art from 2002-2005. To master working in stone she did her Stonemasonry diploma and NVQs at the Building Crafts College before becoming an apprentice stonemason, and subsequently a mason, at York Minster. During her time at York, Catherine completed the Cathedral Workshop Fellowship for which she is now an advocate.

Since 2014 Catherine has lived in Malvern and runs her own small business James Stonework. Catherine specialises in stone sculpture, lettering and heraldry. In 2019 Catherine was presented the Duke of Gloucester Award for Excellence in Stonemasonry. Catherine is presently busy with commissions, but we are delighted to be able to offer some of her original drawings.

Liz Middleton

Liz Middleton is a sculptor, public artist and stone letter cutter based in London.

Liz trained in fine art at the University of Derby, and stone and letter carving at the City and Guilds of London Art School. She was awarded a two year artist-in-residence studio from the Hampshire Sculpture Trust, and has exhibited in solo and group shows in the UK. In 2015 she was commissioned to design and carve a contemporary grotesque for the St Georges Chapel at Windsor Castle. In 2018 she was awarded four site specific public art commissions by a residential developer and award winning independent school Kings High School for Girls in Warwick - unveiled at the beginning of the year by Kathleen Soriano, Chair of the Liverpool Biennial Liz's work is predominantly site-specific responding to a place, people or situation. In parallel to her sculpture she hopes to play a role in the preservation of the endangered heritage craft of letter carving by keeping traditional skills and knowledge alive through contemporary creative practice. One of the sculptures featured in last year's exhibition was selected for the delayed 2020 Royal Academy Summer Show.

Freya Morris

Following completion of a BA in Art History at Warwick University, Freya spent some time in Venice as an intern at the Peggy Guggenheim Museum. During this period, she became increasingly interested in architectural history and on returning to the UK completed an MSc in Historic Building Conservation at Oxford Brookes University. She worked for over 20 years as a Historic Buildings and Conservation Areas Officer for District Councils in Dorset, Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire.

She began carving stone as a hobby, but last year decided that she wanted to pursue it more seriously and enrolled on a Level 1 Stonemasonry Diploma at Moulton College in Northamptonshire.

Ruairi Sweeney

Whilst studying stonemasonry at College Ruairi began experimenting with his own ideas in his spare time. This has now developed into a dynamic craft where each piece is unique, creating a diverse portfolio of work.

Throughout his work he is conscious that the relationship between ancient materials and modern craftsmanship produces something timeless. He wants to honour carefully selected materials and it is important to him that every piece is meticulously finished by hand, using mallets and chisels.

He is passionate about sourcing the materials himself. This ensures he is aware of its origins, whether from a particular field or woodland. Understanding where materials come from is instrumental in realising what they can become. Wherever possible, he works to use reclaimed stone as he believes it is important to respect the environment and produce sustainable work that breathes new life into what has been lost or discarded.

Alex Waddell

Working predominantly in stone Alex Waddell's work is concerned with exploring the idea of national identity and what it means to be British. Referencing historic architectural styles and themes as well from Britain's rich and culturally diverse past Alex questions who we are a people, where we have been and where we are going.

The Stone as a medium is important to the work as capturing a form in it gives the image a timeless quality, which can communicate ideas that would be familiar to people from hundreds of years ago as well as now. Most of the work is in French Limestone from Caen, which is the building material to many of Britain's most historically important buildings alluding to how we have always been connected to mainland Europe through a trade of materials, cultural ideas and people.

Alex Studied Sculpture at Cardiff school of art and Design. His style developed while working at Winchester cathedral in their 'in house' masonry department and is currently working from a workshop based in Cardiff whilst studying historic Stone carving at City and Guilds Art School in London.

Liam Winship

As his career first started as a stonemason for Historic Scotland, he has somewhat of an obsession with all kinds of architectural stone work, which can influence and inspire his work considerably. He loves to sample between art periods and to try to create something modern to a specific style. He is currently undertaking his own interpretations of historical antiques, not only to create a piece of work, but to learn from an old master and try to understand why something was carved in that way.

Girolamo Benivieni, was a Florentine poet and musician, and a leading member of the Medicean Academy. There was a scandal surrounding the original bust made by Giovanni Bastianini almost 300 years after Benivieni's death, using a coin and a painting for reference and a subject who looked like Benivieni. This Neo-Renaissance piece was sold on in Florence and then after exchanging hands a few times was exhibited in the 'Renaissance master's exhibition' in the Louvre, Paris. When Bastianini heard, he claimed the piece as his own. Many called him a liar and his reputation was sullied as a 'forger'. Some proof was given, but sadly he died of a short illness before clearing his name. It took years for the Italian art community to get vindication for Bastianini, which finally came during the summer of 1896.

Edgar Ward

Edgar Ward is a sculptor and stone carver based in London. He uses traditional skills to produce commissioned architectural sculpture alongside an art practice exploring ideas of memory and layers of history in urban sites. He completed an architectural stone carving course at City and Guilds of London Art School in 2018 and is currently studying for an MA in Ceramics at the Royal College of Art.

Notable commissions include a carved portrait of Wayne Marques, hero police officer of the London Bridge attack. The portrait was unveiled at the one-year anniversary ceremony. Heraldic commissions include a shield designed and carved for a memorial to mark the WW1 Centenary at the Haberdashers Hall in London, and a relief carving for the pediment of a private château in Charente, France.

Tom Waugh

Tom Waugh studied Architectural Stone Carving at the City and Guilds of London Art School and has a background in Classical Stone Sculpture. He uses hyper-realism and traditional carving techniques to challenge ideas of material value. Tensions and contradictions present themselves in his work: between traditional and contemporary art; between temporality and permanence and between humour and serious environmental and social issues.

Shawn Williamson

Shawn Williamson had his first early stone sculpture commission including Mary and Babe at Lancaster Priory. Other big works are at Lancaster University campus, arranged through The Peter Scott Gallery. At St Martin's College he was commissioned to sculpt St Martin and the Beggar.

In 1985 Shawn went to Ambleside to work for 85-year-old Josefina de Vasconcellos, a great sculptress with a legacy stretching back to Rodin through Antoine Bourdelle. Keen to learn from his new teacher, Shawn helped Josefina with her larger stone sculpture commissions, while beginning some of his own.

His work follows in the Romantic tradition inspired by Wordsworth, Coleridge and Byron, and William Blake.

Adeline Wartner

Adeline Wartner obtained a Restoration Diploma at the City and Guilds of London Art School in 1999, then worked as a conservator and attended various stone carving classes and workshops. She completed the Advanced Level 3 Stonemasonry Diploma at the Building Crafts College in 2015 and qualified in 2018. She was then made Maker in Residence for two years and is now teaching at the college.

She is also self-employed as a stonemason, stone and letter carver. Works include supervising students carving, and gilding in the garden of the office of architect Amin Taha, a thistle relief carving commission for the Clerk at the Clockmakers Company, two Pennant tables – a chess board and a Carrom board game – for the public arts organisation MUFF, and a vines and quill relief carving commission for a house in France.

Rachael Wragg

Rachael is currently in the second year of her stone masonry apprenticeship at Lincoln Cathedral. Having studied fine art at university 10 years ago, and knowing that she wanted to work in the heritage sector, it took her until the age of 30 to finally find and retrain in her dream job as a heritage stone mason.

Being from Lincolnshire and living there most of her life, the Cathedral holds particular importance to her, so being able to train and work on this beautiful medieval building is very rewarding.

So far in her training she feels fortunate to have been able to try many aspects of heritage masonry from carving to conservation and finds herself repeatedly drawn to the geometric and simplistic designs of the romanesque which is reflected in her carving work.

How your money will be spent:

When you purchase an item from this catalogue, at least 50% of the price is the fair remuneration for the artist concerned. This in itself will assist those artists to stay in the craft of stonemasonry. The whole of the balance of your purchase price is being paid to the charity. Here are some examples of what your contribution can do:

£300 will provide a bursary towards college fees for one student

£350 will purchase a set of specialist tools

£500 will provide a travel grant for a student to visit the marble and stone quarries in Italy

£1,000 will provide financial assistance towards travel and subsistence for apprentices suffering financial hardship

Your contributions will make a tangible difference, and will be gratefully received.

A final word of thanks from Court Assistant Peter Blincow

I would like to express our grateful thanks to Upper Warden Martin Low; Liverymen: John Milne, Neil Phillips and Geoff Spurrier; Freemen: Rachel Beszant and Karina Phillips; Yeoman Rosie Jones, all those masons who have donated works of art for sale and to all those who have made this Event possible.

All proceeds arising from the sale of works of art and donations will be credited to The Masons' Company Craft Fund (Charity Number 292070).

DIFFERENT

The exhibition will take place during Gallery Different's Winter Collective.

This is a group exhibition of Gallery Artists working across a wide range of media - paintings, prints, drawings, mixed media and of course sculpture. Three of the gallery artists for whom stone is integral to their practice will be exhibiting, and examples of their work are shown here.

If you purchase any work from the Winter Collective, 10% of sales proceeds will be donated to the Masons' Company Craft Fund. Full catalogue of work available at www.gallerydifferent.com.

Johannes von Stumm PP RSS

Johannes von Stumm is the Past President of the Royal Society of Sculptors; current President of the Oxford Art Society and a founder member of Sculpture Network Europe. His career has spanned 30 years and he has exhibited widely throughout the UK and Europe.

He is known for the complex combinations of materials, shapes and textures. The intertwining and interlocking elements of stone, bronze, steel, glass and wood fuse the strong with the fragile, the solid with the liquid, the smooth with the rough. The interplay between the elements is captivating. His recent solo exhibition was very successful. A catalogue of his work is available on request.

Dawn Rowland FRSS

Dawn Rowland explores the interdependency and fragility of human relationships and how these fit into the world around us. She expresses her own experiences – her personal and emotional CV – but the underlying feelings are universal. Some resonate with the transient nature of bringing up a child to adulthood. Others deal with these relationships through life.

Touch is that special connection in a relationship and therefore hands are also very important in her work.

A two-week stone carving course changed her life forever. "I was totally drawn to stone. There is a physicality and sensuality to working in stone." Most of the time she carves directly, retaining the freshness and spontaneity that only direct carving can bring.

Mel Fraser MRSS

Mel Fraser is a Cambridge based artist of immense creativity, sensitivity and natural ability. Completely self taught, Fraser has honed her skills to a level where she has been commissioned for work to go into global locations.

Her abstract work uses the perfection of line and surface to play with light and shadow. Works that use glass like alabaster that are transparent; Carrera marble pieces that have lace edges and perfect balance; geometric forms of such precision, it is difficult to believe they are cut by hand. Her figurative pieces show a sensitivity and understanding of human forms and emotions.
